

Beowulf: The Noble Legacy of a Heroic Warrior

7 pages | 1630 words

In Beowulf, an epic poem which was written anonymously 1,070 years ago, the main character stood as the embodiment of the heroic code; being revered for his heroic qualities that are shown throughout the poem. From the beginning of the story, nobility and heroism were considered to be the most important factor of life in that Anglo-Saxon era. Now, many would go about boasting their achievements to gain this nobility but, as the story progressed over a span of 50 years, Beowulf encountered three main conflicts that allowed him to show not only his immense strength and bravery, but his humble character and loyalty to the heroic code. All of these traits prove Beowulf to be a true hero, even though he lead to a defeat at the end of the story. The three main conflicts that Beowulf encountered were between Grendel, Grendel's mother, and the dragon. In the first battle, Beowulf pridefully volunteered to take on Grendel as a young, unarmed warrior, even though it wasn't his battle to fight and he was up against a powerful being that wasn't even human. The reason he did fight was because he showed loyalty to Hrothgar. Hrothgar was the leader of the Danes in this time period and lost security in his community when Grendel ravaged through the town and killed his people. As stated in the text, Beowulf, " In his own homeland, the thane of Hygelac, the valiant Geat, heard the tales told of Grendel. This Geat was among men the greatest in strength, most noble and mighty, for as long as his life-days were destined to last." (page 80) In this quote, it is explained how Beowulf showed to be loyal to the heroic code when he killed Grendel, and he held enough strength to take him on. Since Hrothgar had helped Beowulf's father in the past by paying his dues, Beowulf felt indebted to him and wanted to show his gratitude by fighting his town's battle. The fact that he went out of his way, in a town he doesn't even live in, to help an entire community is so meaningful, especially since he didn't do it to get gifts or leadership. Beowulf expressed his loyalty to Hrothgar's people by saying, "I purposed in spirit when I mounted the ocean, When I boarded my boat with a band of my liegemen, I would work to the fullest the will of your people Or in foe's-clutches fastened fall in the battle. Deeds I shall do of daring and prowess, Or the last of my life-days live in this mead-hall." (page 31). In this speech, he explained that he had full loyalty to this community, and vowed to do everything he can to protect them or die trying. This was a very powerful quote that set the tone for the rest of the poem, because readers got to see how he truly felt about his role in this town. In the second battle with Grendel's mother, Beowulf took on the protector role once again and fought her when she came to the hall to avenge her son, Grendel. This...
