In the [ ] phase of the SDLC, the project team identifies potential software solutions, such as the use of programming languages, application [ ] tools, or application software. A(n) [ ] system might offer a complete hardware and software solution. When the solution requires custom programming, a(n) [ ] design phase produces specifications that describe the way the new information system should interact with users, store data, process data, and format reports. Development can be derailed by unmanaged [ ] creep, so the team should have a formal system of change requests. During the [ ] phase of the SDLC, the project team supervises the technicians who set up new hardware, install programming languages and other application [ ] tools, create and test applications, and customize software. The team also finalizes the system documentation and trains users. In this phase, three types of testing ensure that new software works correctly. [ ] testing is performed on each module, and then [ ] testing is performed to make sure that all the modules work together correctly. [ ] testing ensures that the software components work correctly on the hardware and with other, perhaps older, elements of the information system. Four types of information system go-live conversions are possible: direct, parallel, phased, or pilot. At the end of the conversion process, the information system undergoes a final test called [ ] testing, designed to assure the system's owner that the new system works as specified. After testing and installation, an information system enters the [ ] phase of its life cycle.
