Pandemic Times John Solomos,2021-09-30 This edited collection brings together social scientists working on race and ethnicity to address the question of the impact of the Covid 19 pandemic with a focus on issues linked to racial and ethnic inequalities The fourteen chapters that make up this collection were produced during the pandemic in 2020 and are intended to address key facets of the impact of the pandemic in contemporary Europe the United States and globally Individual chapters address the pandemic by drawing both on empirical research and conceptual analysis They also seek to draw important connections between broader dimensions of racial and ethnic inequalities and the health inequalities that have been highlighted by the sharp impact of the pandemic on particular communities and groups This volume speaks to the need for researchers working on race and ethnicity to respond to the Covid 19 pandemic through both original research and by reflection on current policy challenges and interventions The chapters in this book were originally published as a themed
