

Anatomy of Respiratory System

Consists of an upper respiratory tract (nose to larynx) and a lower respiratory tract (trachea onwards)

Conducting portion transports air: includes the nose, nasal cavity, pharynx, larynx, trachea, and progressively smaller airways, from the primary bronchi to the terminal bronchioles. Respiratory portion carries out gas exchange: composed of small airways called respiratory bronchioles and alveolar ducts as well as air sacs called alveoli

Respiratory system function:

- 1) supplies the body with oxygen and disposes of carbon dioxide
- 2) filters inspired air
- 3) produces sound
- 4) contains receptors for smell
- 5) rids the body of some excess water and heat
- 6) Helps regulate blood pH.

Breathing (pulmonary ventilation). Consists of two cyclic phases:

Inhalation, also called inspiration - draws gases into the lungs. Exhalation, also called expiration - forces gases out of the lungs.

Upper Respiratory Tract: Composed of the nose and nasal cavity, paranasal sinuses, pharynx (throat), larynx. All part of the conducting portion of the respiratory system.

Respiratory mucosa: A layer of pseudostratified ciliated columnar epithelial cells that secrete mucus. Found in nose, sinuses, pharynx, larynx and trachea Mucus can trap contaminants. Cilia move mucus up towards mouth

Nose: it has 3 parts.

1. Internal nares - opening to exterior.
2. External nares opening to pharynx.
3. Nasal conchae - folds in the mucous membrane that increase air turbulence and ensure that most air contacts the mucous membranes.

Pharynx: Common space used by both the respiratory and digestive systems. Commonly called the throat. Originates posterior to the nasal and oral cavities and extends inferiorly near the level of the bifurcation of the larynx and esophagus. Common pathway for both air and food. Walls are lined by a mucosa and contain skeletal muscles that are primarily used for swallowing. Flexible lateral walls are distensible in order to force swallowed food into the esophagus.

eight pages inserted in a Chapter on Mutterkorn by Arthur R Cushing were considered enough in Vol II Part II pp 1319 1326 of the Hand buch Now 922 pages did not suffice to cover all aspects of the subject the subject has been expanded in so many directions that the anti histaminic part had to be excluded from the present volume Possibly another thousand pages will be necessary to cover what remains of the subject This prediction was fulfilled and the subject of histamine has grown to such an extent that dealing with the antihistaminics only in Part II would be quite inadequate It is imperative to include the large number of recent findings on the subject of histamine namely the splitting of its pharmacologic receptors and the great variety of new contributions on its participation in physiopathologic phenomena metabolism and interaction with newly found
