Active Killer Survival Manual Laura Kendall, 2017-07. It is said that you do not rise to the occasion in combat; you sink to the level of your training. This is a quick guide on what to do during an active killer shooter situation. It is not meant to be comprehensive, for I don't believe you can learn what you need to do in such an attack by simply reading a book. It should, at the very least, give you basic knowledge on what to do should you find yourself face-to-face with active killing (shooting, stabbing, or terrorist attack). I have also included a link you can sign up to get free training resources on my websites: www.traintorespond.com and activekillersurvivaltraining.com. This is a manual I give to my students during my live training workshops/classes. In live training, we are able to go in depth into each topic area and then do hands-on training utilizing moulage, tourniquets, combat gauze, manikins, and live victims. It also serves as a handy reference guide afterwards for our students to refer to for important training points. I highly suggest that you find a workshop or class and get hands-on training in active killer and tactical trauma care so that you will feel prepared in how to react and respond during an active killer attack. Our civilian training is available for business corporations, organizations, gun ranges, and groups, and you can learn more at www.traintorespond.com. With scores of first responders and civilians trained, I believe that everyone should attend live training and know this valuable information. It may well save your life or the life of your co-workers, family, and friends. Please remember to have situational awareness at all times. Trust your gut. If something doesn't feel right to you, then don't do it. If you see something, say something. Be safe out there. This guide is written by Laura J. Kendall, MICP, who has over 36 years of
