Architecture For Humanity Los Angeles:

Early Architects of Los Angeles Antonio Gonzalez, 2026-01-30 Professional architects first began to arrive in California in the 1880s. These architects wanted to practice their profession but were unknown entities so they stood little chance against the established architectural firms in the major cities of Chicago and New York. Instead of wrestling oversized opponents for tidbits of work they journeyed to California. They may have gone to San Francisco first but they quickly discovered it was similar to the big eastern and midwestern cities with known and trusted architectural firms so they turned and looked south to that small pueblo called Los Angeles with a population of 11,183 in 1880. Los Angeles was an unpleasant place back then filled with unpaved streets, dirty water, unsavory characters, and lawlessness. No sensible person would have wanted to live there. But the architects who designed Los Angeles saw the possibilities for a career and a new life. With hope as their motivation, these architects cast aside their doubts, ventured to the tiny pueblo and built the foundation for what would become the greatest city on the western edge of the United States. This book presents the lives and achievements of fifteen such architects who built the Los Angeles we know today. Spanning from the 1880s to the early 1900s, this first of its kind history gives insight into the buildings and people that made Los Angeles and the legacies which loom large and deep into the present day.

Dwell, 2002-06 At Dwell we're staging a minor revolution. We think that it's possible to live in a house or apartment by a bold modern architect to own furniture and products that are exceptionally well designed and still be a regular human being. We think that good design is an integral part of real life. And that real life has been conspicuous by its absence in most design and architecture magazines.

Toward an Integrated Science of Wellbeing Elizabeth Rieger, Robert Costanza, Ida Kubiszewski, Paul Dugdale, 2023-05-19 There has always been interest in understanding what constitutes the good life and the basis for creating it. Much has been written about health and wellbeing from the perspectives of diverse disciplines such as psychology, medicine, economics, social science, ecology, and political science. However, the interconnections between these perspectives have received far less attention. In Toward an Integrated Science of Wellbeing, the contributing authors connect these diverse perspectives and consider the interconnections between the psychological, human, biological, societal, and environmental domains of wellbeing. This integrated approach offers a first step toward a more complete understanding of wellbeing that can propel wellbeing research and initiatives in novel and fruitful directions.

Architecture, 2006 Architectural Forum, 1912 The Allegorical Architectural Machine Daniel K. Brown, Michael Chapman, 2024-10-28 The intersection of architecture and the machine has a history that stretches back to the Industrial Revolution; however, the machine has recently begun to appear in new ways in speculative architectural drawing and modelling. This issue of AD considers the influence of the machine as an allegorical device for exploring alternative architectural practices and includes a cross section of viewpoints from emerging and established international practitioners and academics. Allegory, a technique native to literature, provides a critical method through which machine typologies can contribute to deeper architectural narratives offering new lenses for challenging or reassembling conventional modes of thought An allegorical architectural project can unveil a story that enhances our awareness of something important This AD reveals how engagement with the machine as an allegorical device in architectural discourse provides an avenue for architecture to provoke new ideas in response to current environmental political economic cultural and social issues At the forefront of this discussion it extends the criticality of the topic within the broader spectrum of history theory philosophy allegory and new technologies Contributors Daniela Atencio and Claudio Rossi Peter Baldwin Brian Cantley Kirill Chelushkin Giuliano Fiorenzoli Marissa Lindquist Bea Martin Derek Hales Wes Jones Brian M Kelly Tom Kundig and Caleb White Featured architects and designers Jones Partners Architecture Olson Kundig Adolfo Luis Moure Strangis and Liam Young
