

REPLACING A DISH 300 WITH A DISH 500

You may want to replace a DISH 300 dish mounted at the 119 Wire location with a DISH 500 dish at a new or the 119 Wire and 119 Wire location. In this case, follow the instructions carefully, except:

1. Before you take apart the existing DISH 300 system, do these steps (in order):
  - a. Turn the Power On and Signal Strength tests. Note down the current signal strength. The signal strength should be about the same as the DISH 300 signal strength when you use the Dish at the same location and use the same transponder. The DISH Interactive Point Dish menu shows the signal strength on a scale of 0 to 100, while the new DISH Interactive menu shows the strength on a scale of 0 to 120.
  - b. After each location to download the latest software. See each location's User Guide for instructions that apply to that location. Note: The download may take 15 minutes or more. Do not attempt to unplug the receiver until the time.
  - c. Do the Finding the Location procedure.
2. Now, take apart the existing DISH 300 system.

	You may be able to reuse the existing mast and mounting feet. Use a bubble level to make sure that the top part of the existing or new mast is as close as possible to vertical. If the top of the mast is off vertical by only a few degrees, it will be difficult or impossible for you to find the satellites. If you use a mast dish mounting location for the DISH 500, you must ground the mast wire per the National Electrical Code (NEC) and local electrical codes. If you do not reuse the existing DISH 300 dish mounting, remove the mounting and its grounding system. Do not leave an existing dish mounting in place without grounding.
----------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

3. Do the Finding a Clear Line of Sight procedure.

Note: Remember that you need to aim the dish at a new location in the sky. This new location is described here in the User Guide. The angle is about 20° north or south when you find your present strength.
4. Do the Mounting the Receiver Dish procedure.

Note: Re-use the existing LNB for the 119 Wire satellite signal.
5. Do the Aiming the Dish for the Strongest Signal procedure, except for the following:
  - Remember that you need to aim the dish at a new location in the sky.
  - Remember that the DISH 500 signal strength should be about the same as the DISH 300 signal strength when you aim to the same satellite and use the same transponder. The DISH Interactive Point Dish menu shows the signal strength on a scale of 0 to 120, while the new DISH Interactive menu shows the strength on a scale of 0 to 100.
  - If you use SW12 switches, check mounting the DISH 500 before you install the switches.
  - Use each receiver to check the switch setup.
6. Do the rest of the installation by following the instructions.
7. Call the Service Center at 1-800-345-2000 (3474) to order your programs. Then, open the Program Guide to find a program that you want to watch. See the User Guide that came with the receiver for instructions. Note: This is to take full advantage of all the programs available from both 119 Wire and 119 Wire, not just 119 Wire.

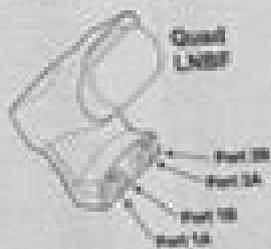

Multi-Dish Installations

You may have an existing DISH 500 multi-dish system. In this case, you can use these instructions except for the following:

- Before you take apart the DISH 500 system, allow each receiver to download the latest software. See each location's User Guide for instructions that apply to the location. Note: The download may take 15 minutes or more. Do not attempt to unplug the receiver during the time.
- While you are removing the DISH 500 dish, take care not to scratch any other DISH dish in the system. When you finish the DISH 500 installation, then connect any other DISH dish into the same system. Note: If you replace the DISH 500 dish to mount at a location with a DISH 300-mount or hole in the wire and 119 Wire, you may not need a DISH 300-mount or a 119 Wire or 119 Wire.

	If you do not reuse an existing DISH 500 dish mounting, remove the mounting and its grounding system. Do not leave an existing dish mounting in place without grounding.
-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------

- If you use a TransLNB: You can use each of the central cables from the LNB directly to a receiver. Or, you can use the cables to two SW12 multi-dish switches, along with the cables from a DISH 500 dish. The central cable from a Dish LNB is one color each. The Dish LNB has a built-in switch that works only with an SW12 switch. Some receivers that support the use of 119 Wire LNBs with SW12 switches:
  - If you have a Twin LNB with SW12 multi-dish switches: Do these steps to ground the LNB:
    - a. Mount the DISH 500 dish for the strongest signal.
    - b. Turn the SW12 switches on.
    - c. Do not mount the SW12 switches on.
    - d. Use a multimeter check the wire.
    - e. Connect the DISH 500 into the new system.
    - f. Aim the DISH 500 dish for the strongest signal.
    - g. Now, mount the SW12 switches.
    - h. Use each receiver to check SW setup.
  - If you use a Quad LNB: You can use each of the central cables from the LNB directly to a receiver. Or, you can use the cables from SW12 or an SW12 multi-dish switch, but not to any other switch. The Quad LNB has a built-in switch that works only with an SW12 or SW12 switch.
  - If you use an SW12 or an SW12 multi-dish switch: You must connect the 119 central cables to the 1A and 1B multi-dish switches. The main reason for 119 cables to the 1A and 1B multi-dish switches. For an SW12 switch, use the 1A and 1B multi-dish cables for the cables from a DISH 500 dish. The other switch, you must connect the central cables to a switch using a 119 multi-dish cable to a ground location. You must connect the switches to an AC power source (for example, a wall outlet) and an AC power source (for example, a wall outlet).
  - If you use a Quad LNB with a multi-dish switch: You must connect the central cables from each Quad LNB output port to the switching connection on the switch. The Quad LNB has 1A, 1B, 1C, and 1D output ports as shown below.

• You must check any multi-dish switch setup using each receiver in the system.
