Discovery Accelerator User Guide:

Scaling Python with Ray Holden Karau, Boris Lublinsky, 2022-11-29 Serverless computing enables developers to concentrate solely on their applications rather than worry about where they've been deployed. With the Ray general purpose serverless implementation in Python, programmers and data scientists can hide servers, implement stateful applications, support direct communication between tasks, and access hardware accelerators. In this book, experienced software architecture practitioners Holden Karau and Boris Lublinsky show you how to scale existing Python applications and pipelines, allowing you to stay in the Python ecosystem while reducing single points of failure and manual scheduling. Scaling Python with Ray is ideal for software architects and developers eager to explore successful case studies and learn more about decision and measurement effectiveness. If your data processing or server application has grown beyond what a single computer can handle, this book is for you. You'll explore distributed processing, the pure Python implementation of serverless, and learn how to implement stateful applications with Ray actors, build workflow management in Ray, use Ray as a unified system for batch and stream processing, apply advanced data processing with Ray, build microservices with Ray, and implement reliable Ray applications.

Transitioning to Autonomy Ronald McLeod, 2026-02-11 Whenever automation is introduced to control real-time activities or processes, the role of the human changes from being a manual controller to being a supervisory controller. Whether the activity is the control of vehicles, industrial processes, or is in defence, healthcare, or elsewhere, the work performed by the people who are expected to monitor and supervise the automation places new demands on their attention, perception, and cognition. Those demands can be significant and challenging, and this book aims to address that. Transitioning to Autonomy: The Psychology of Human Supervisory Control focuses on the transition period when automation is being introduced, and the human needs to learn and develop the competence to perform their new role effectively. The first Part extracts general lessons from the author's experience taking ownership of a new car which, under certain circumstances, was capable of driving autonomously. Part 2 explores the psychology behind the lessons extracted in Part 1 and proposes a comprehensive model of human supervisory control. The final Part focuses on six principal risks associated with human supervisory control and examines how the expectation that people will be proactive in monitoring for threats to the automation's performance is often relied on as a defence or barrier against serious adverse events. The core benefit for the reader is a deeper understanding of what it takes cognitively, emotionally, and organisationally to ensure safe and effective human oversight in the age of automation. It aims to give the reader the lowdown on delivering safer systems. The book is for managers, engineers, safety professionals, and those from other technical disciplines who have responsibility for the design, development, and/or assurance of products that automate the control of real-time activities. It's for regulators and others responsible for setting policy and ensuring products automating real-time activities are safe, and it's for Human Factors and other professionals who need to understand and develop competence in aspects of the psychology associated
