

Purpose

This project was done because there are people that want to know which pitch will go the fastest out of the baseball, softball, and slider. This project is useful because there are kids that play baseball or know about baseball that want to know which pitch will go faster. This could benefit for others because when they pitch they could know what pitch to throw.

Hypothesis

For this project the baseball will go the fastest because of the velocity behind it and it is easier to throw.

Background Research

A slider is a breaking ball pitch that will eventually end down through the batter's hitting zone. It is thrown with one hand from a baseball but greater than the pitcher's baseball. The slider is similar to that made with the other hand.

BASEBALL SCIENCE

Abstract

This project is to find out which baseball pitch is faster being done because people like to throw the baseball, play baseball, or want to play baseball, want to know which will go the fastest. What pitch will go the fastest baseball, softball, or slider? The baseball will go the fastest out of the softball, and the slider ball pitch will be slower. I know and the speed will be found out by a video game.

Data Tables

Pitch	Speed (mph)	Time (s)
Baseball	95	0.4
Softball	70	0.5
Slider	85	0.45
Control	90	0.42

Results

The data table was very consistent, the highest the pitcher threw was 95 mph and the lowest was 70 mph. The data is grouped together because the experimenters know how to throw each pitch. The position for the baseball was 95 mph, for the softball it was 70 mph, and for the slider it was 85 mph. The results were mostly all the numbers were in the bottom. Changing the independent affected the dependent variable because the ball was thrown slower because of the grip of the pitch.

Conclusion

Which pitch will go the fastest, baseball, softball or slider? The baseball will go the fastest out of the slider and the softball. The baseball did go the fastest because the softball was 70 mph and the slider was 85 mph. The experimenters concluded that the grip makes a difference in the speed and all the experimenters concluded that the baseball goes the fastest.
