Be just and fear not

Remarkable team spirit central to great club's longevity

CASTLEBAR CELTIC Celebrates CENTENARY

By Tom Kelly

Castlebar Celtic started with nothing in 1924.

Not even a team.

It took almost eight years before the club adopted the name of the great Scottish club, Celtic FC, founded by Irish Martin Burke and Michael, both by Irish emigrants and based across the Republic of Ireland.

Today, Castlebar Celtic is firmly established as a major sporting force across the county, province and nation, the image above telling us much about the club's history over the past century and how far it has come from humble beginnings.

From 1924 to 2024 has been a long and challenging journey and one punctuated by no little success, setbacks and a fair degree of heartache.

A huge impediment hanging over the club's early development was the infamous Rule 27 of the GAA, a rule in force from 1905 to 1971 that banned good footballers who were members of the GAA from playing or watching other sports such as soccer.

The club was born into a deeply divided Ireland, the Civil War having ended the previous season.

A general election had been held on August 27, 1923, which Cumann na nGaedheal, the pro-Free State party, won with about 40% of the first-preference vote.

The Republicans, represented by Sinn Féin, won about 27% of the vote. Many of their candidates and supporters were still imprisoned behind bars, during and after the election.

Like the nation itself, Castlebar's first soccer club, or team to be more exact, was facing into uncertain times, unsure of its future in a society in which poverty and division abounded.

Against this background, to reach 100 years of existence is not in its achievement to be admired, a triumph for dedication, perseverance and the commitment and courage of so many people.

Those qualities are an inspiration today as when a group of men met in a room in Market Square in 1924 to form a soccer club in Castlebar for the first time.

The triumph is that it survived in the face of adversity.

There is evidence that soccer was played in Castlebar on a somewhat organised basis prior to 1924.

When I wrote the history of Mayo Football, Soccer, Rules and Fantasy Free in 2006, the earliest reference I found of soccer being played in a formal manner was in 1896 when a team representing the county team played a Mayo selection at Inishard.

It included such names as John McGough, Mame Flannery, Myles Quinney and John Munnally.

While it is a fact that Castlebar Celtic was set up in 1924, it's an accepted fact that it did not play under the name of Castlebar Celtic until 1932. A photograph which holds pride of place in the Celtic clubhouse at Fadhán Road supports this theory.

The photograph was in the possession of the late Larry Burke, Springfield Terrace, Castlebar, father of Frank and Jerry, both of whom have a close association with the club. When I spoke to him about it many years ago, he was certain it was the first team to play under the name Castlebar Celtic.

The photograph includes such names as Hughie McGarland, Joe Kilroy, Condie Gannon, Christy McHale, the club's first player to win international recognition, Tommy Leonard, Paddy McGough, Tommy Kenrick, John Burke, 'Bossen' Clarke and Jimmy Kilroy.

Two of those men, Tommy Kenrick and Ough-tuive Hughie McGarland, were to play central roles over the coming decades in putting the club on a solid foundation.

They were helped in no small way by people of the calibre of Charlie Hanley, who became the club's first secretary, Tommy McDonald, Tommy Kilbrath, Tommy Leonard, Peter O'Malley, Robert Kilbray, Joe McCormack, Michael Heverin, Chas. Gurbie, Paddy Gilligan and many others.
