

DNA REPLICATION STUDY-GUIDE

DNA REPLICATION

01 ENZYMES

Replication involves an enzyme complex, among the DNA polymerase and a helicase, that try to continuously tear off enzymes.

- Helicase unzips the double helix by breaking hydrogen bonds, creating a replication fork.
- DNA polymerase synthesizes DNA by adding nucleotides to the growing strand.
- DNA ligase joins DNA fragments together.

02 DIRECTIONALITY

Because DNA polymerase can only synthesize DNA in the 5' to 3' direction, the two strands are synthesized in opposite directions.

The leading strand is synthesized continuously towards the replication fork. The lagging strand is synthesized discontinuously away from the replication fork.

03 PROOFREADING

DNA polymerase has a proofreading function that allows it to detect and correct errors in the newly synthesized DNA.

When an error is detected, DNA polymerase will remove the incorrect nucleotide and replace it with the correct one.

04 ENZYMES

Specialized enzymes help coordinate replication.

- Helicase unzips the double helix, creating the replication fork.
- DNA polymerase synthesizes DNA by adding nucleotides to the growing strand, checking for errors as it goes.

Other enzymes support strand separation and reconnection of fragments. These proteins also ensure accurate duplication of the genome.

DNA REPLICATION

01 DNA STRUCTURE

DNA is a double-stranded molecule composed of nucleotides, each containing a phosphate group, a deoxyribose sugar, and a nitrogenous base.

The two strands run antiparallel (5' to 3' and 3' to 5') and hold each other together by hydrogen bonds, with hydrogen and covalent bonds within each strand. Complementary base pairs hold together the two strands. The sugar-phosphate backbone provides structural stability and protects the genetic code encoded in the base sequence.

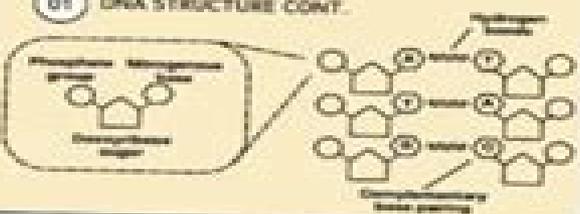

02 DNA BASE SEQUENCE

The order of bases acts as a code for building proteins.

Each triplet of bases (codon) corresponds to a specific amino acid sequence, determining the structure and function of proteins.

Nucleotides contain only one phosphate and covalent structure, while the coding sequence is determined by the sequence of bases.

03 DNA STRUCTURE CONT.

Complementary base pairing

03 SEMI-CONSERVATIVE

When a cell divides, each daughter cell receives one original and one newly synthesized DNA molecule.

Replication is semi-conservative: the two strands that separate from the parent molecule are used as templates to synthesize two new strands.

The double helix unzips and complementary base pairing occurs with each original template strand to form two new DNA molecules.

04 KEY TERMS

Nucleotide
Basic unit of DNA, composed of a phosphate, deoxyribose sugar, and nitrogenous base.

Complementary base pairing
A base pair with T, A and C, G pairs with its opposite partner (A-T, C-G).

Semi-conservative replication
New DNA molecules contain one original strand.

Template strand
The original DNA strand used to synthesize a complementary copy.

Antiparallel
Strands run in opposite directions (5' to 3' and 3' to 5').

Helicase
Unzips DNA.

DNA Polymerase
Synthesizes the new strand of DNA by adding nucleotides.
