

The Nervous System

The nervous system is a network of nerves and other cells.

The Nervous System

The nervous system is the network of nerves and other specialized cells that work together to carry information between the brain and spinal cord and the other parts of the body. These signals are used for three broad tasks: obtaining information from the outside world (sensory input), processing that information (data integration), and performing some action in response to the information once it's processed (motor output). These three tasks allow you walk, run, talk, see, hear, feel, think, and even breathe.

The Parts of the Nervous System

There are two parts of the nervous system, the central nervous system (CNS) and the peripheral nervous system (PNS).

The CNS consists of the brain and spinal cord. This is where most of the thinking and handling of information happens. Your brain takes in information from the outside world (e.g., a ball is coming towards you), figures out what to do (catch the ball), and then sends the message where it needs to go (to your arms and hands). In the example scenario, the sensory input is the information - coming from your eyes (the nerves of which are part of the peripheral nervous system) - that a ball is approaching. The data integration stage includes figuring out that you need to raise your arms and open your hands to catch the ball. The motor output will be actually moving your muscles to catch the ball, but that is carried out by your peripheral nervous system, which we'll cover next. The spinal cord is essentially the middleman. It receives information from the brain and sends it out to the body through the nerves that attach to it. It also receives information from the body (via nerves) and sends that information to the brain for processing.

The PNS is all the nerves that run from the spinal cord to the rest of your body, like your arms and legs. These nerves transmit signals from your brain telling your arms to move, your heart to beat, etc. They are also responsible for sending signals to the brain about the outside world (seeing, hearing, feeling, tasting). It is this these nerves that are responsible for the sensory input and motor output stages of a nervous

The PNS is all the nerves running from the spinal cord to the rest of the body.

Nerves (Neurons)

Nerve cells, or neurons, are the workhorses of the nervous system. They are the cells that carry the messages around the body. Nerves are made up of the cell body, the neuronal membrane, dendrites, and the axon. The cell body takes in information and makes proteins. The neuronal membrane covers the neuron and prevents
