Respiratory System Physiology

Mechanics of Respiration

1. For each of the following cases, check the column appropriate to your observations on the operation of the model lung.

Change	Diaphragm pushed up		Diaphragm pulled down
	Increased	Decreased	Increased	Decreased
In internal volume of the bell jar (thoracic cage)		X	X
In internal pressure	X			X
In the size of the balloons (lungs)		X	X

2. Base your answers to the following on your observations in question 1.

Under what internal conditions does air tend to flow into the lungs?

When thoracic volume increases and thoracic pressure decreases.

Under what internal conditions does air tend to flow out of the lungs? Explain why this is so. _____

When thoracic volume decreases and thoracic pressure increases. Gases move in the direction that tends to equalize inside and outside the container.

3. Activation of the diaphragm and the external intercostal muscles begins the inspiratory process. What effect does contraction of these muscles have on thoracic volume, and how is this accomplished? _____

Increases volume and decreases pressure and allows for gas to travel down its gas/pressure gradient

4. What was the approximate increase in diameter of chest circumference during a quiet inspiration? 2-5 cm
During forced inspiration? 7-8 cm

What temporary physiological advantage is created by the substantial increase in chest circumference during forced inspiration? Increases thoracic volume, resulting in a higher negative internal pressure, which causes gases to rush in more quickly. The alveoli receive more oxygen-rich air.

5. The presence of a partial vacuum between the pleural membranes is integral to normal breathing movements. What would happen if an opening were made into the chest cavity, as with a puncture wound?

It would destroy the partial vacuum in the pleural space and the lung on the affect side collapses.

What must be done to treat this condition medically? Air is withdrawn and the chest is closed
