

Introduction

The first step in the design process is to define the problem. This involves identifying the user requirements, the constraints, and the objectives of the system. Once the problem is defined, the next step is to develop a conceptual design. This involves creating a high-level overview of the system and its components. The final step is to develop a detailed design. This involves creating a complete set of specifications and drawings for the system.

Conceptual Design

The conceptual design phase is the first step in the design process. It involves creating a high-level overview of the system and its components. This phase is often the most challenging, as it requires a deep understanding of the user requirements and the constraints of the system. The conceptual design is typically represented by a block diagram or a flowchart.
