Introduction

Whether we like it or not, Microsoft's Office suite of apps is going to work its way into most of our lives at some point or another. Maybe you are forced to use it for work, or maybe you just enjoy using, but either way, it's going to come up. Say what you will about the Office 365 transition, but this has made the Office suite better in almost every regard, all while getting it onto more platforms than ever before.

Today we're going to look at one pillar of the Office 365 package, Microsoft Word. More specifically, let's look at the iPad version to see how it compares to other versions of Word in 2019, as well as how well it plays with iOS in general.

Welcome to Word on the iPad

Microsoft Word for the iPad is a well-made, high quality word processing app that will likely be all most people need to get their Office-related work done from their favorite tablet. As we'll talk about more later, this is not a carbon copy of the desktop app, but it is a feature-rich app that lets you do quite a bit of work in Word documents you create alone or are using to collaborate with others.

That said, this is more true if you are willing to lock yourself into Microsoft's ecosystem. For example, the collaboration and auto-save functions that make the app truly useful only work if you are also storing your documents in OneDrive. If you are using iCloud Drive or Dropbox for syncing your files between devices, then these features goof away. There are a non-trivial number of people who will see this as a deal-breaker, and there is no shortage of low reviews on the App Store for just these reasons. If you plan on using Word for the iPad, I highly suggest you also commit to keeping your documents in OneDrive so you get the best possible
