The diagram illustrates the 'like dissolves like' principle. It shows three beakers. The first, labeled 'Oil and water', shows two distinct layers: a yellowish oil layer on top and a clear water layer on the bottom. The second, labeled 'Water and rubbing alcohol', shows a single, clear, uniform liquid. The third, labeled 'Oil and dry cleaning fluid', shows a single, uniform greenish liquid. Below the beakers are circular insets showing molecular models. The first inset shows water molecules (red and white spheres) and alcohol molecules (red, white, and green spheres). The second inset shows tetrachloroethylene molecules (black and white spheres) and oil molecules (blue and green spheres).
