New Insights & Updates on The Molecular Epidemiology and Antimicrobial Resistance of MRSA in Humans in the Whole-Genome Sequencing Era David Coleman, Anna Shore, Richard Goering, Stefan Monecke, 2019-07-11 Methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus MRSA have been a major cause of healthcare associated HA infection globally for several decades During this time many distinct clones have emerged independently around the world some of which have achieved pandemic status More recently community associated CA and livestock associated MRSA clones have also emerged some of which have become established in hospitals and other healthcare facilities and sometimes have displaced previously predominant HA clones Importantly MRSA can frequently exhibit resistance to a wide range of clinically relevant antibiotics which limits treatment options and complicates patient management and outcomes Investigating routes of transmission and spread of MRSA in healthcare facilities have conventionally been undertaken by combining available epidemiological information with data from DNA based typing systems such as pulse field gel electrophoresis typing spa typing multilocus sequence typing and more recently DNA microarray profiling However these approaches can frequently lack the discriminatory ability to differentiate between MRSA isolates in healthcare environments where a relatively small number of clones may predominate The advent of high throughput whole genome sequencing WGS over the last decade with the development of affordable easy to use benchtop DNA sequencing platforms associated sequencing chemistry and bioinformatics tools has revolutionized studies of MRSA epidemiology and evolution The significantly enhanced discriminatory power and resolution afforded by WGS has also provided hitherto unimaginable insights into the origins emergence and factors that drive the evolution of specific MRSA clones Furthermore WGS has highlighted the very significant contributions of mobile genetic elements MGEs encoding virulence factors and resistance genes from coagulase negative staphylococcal CoNS species to the emergence and evolution of MRSA This Research Topic brings together a collection of original research articles and up to date reviews that highlight the significant impact WGS is having on our understanding of the epidemiology and routes of transmission of HA and CA MRSA in humans and the phylogenetics and evolution of specific MRSA clones The Research Topic also highlights the impact that WGS is having on our understanding of antimicrobial resistance in MRSA by acquisition of MGEs and the role of specific CoNS species in the origins and evolution of particular MGEs that can promote the survival of MRSA following acquisition Finally the Research Topic highlights the immense potential impact of WGS technology in surveillance rapid pathogen detection identification of virulence factor profiles and antibiotic resistance genotypes possibly from clinical samples directly

Politics of International Human Rights Law Promotion in Western Europe Koldo Casla, 2019-06-19

This book offers a critical reinterpretation of Western European States programmatic support for International Human Rights Law IHRL since the 1970s It examines the systemic or structural constraints inherent to the international legal system and argues that order trumps justice in Western Europe s promotion of international human rights norms The book shows that IHRL evolved as a result of a tension between two forces A European understanding of international society based on order the centrality of the State and a minimalist conception of human rights and a civil society and UN promoted mostly Western particularly European but broader conception of human rights based on justice As such human rights norms emerge and develop when some states idea of order meets with advocates idea of justice We are living a historical juncture of shifting tectonic plates with rising nationalism in the Global North ever growing power in the Global South and a declining presence of Europe in global affairs The conditions under which IHRL emerged have fundamentally changed and unpacking the factors beneath the international recognition of human rights has never been more pressing This book will be of key interest to scholars students and practitioners in human rights law public international law international relations critical legal theory and in European politics

Multisensory and sensorimotor interactions in speech perception Kaisa Tiippana, Jean-Luc

Schwartz, Riikka Möttönen, 2015-06-26 Speech is multisensory since it is perceived through several senses Audition is the most important one as speech is mostly heard The role of vision has long been acknowledged since many articulatory gestures can be seen on the talker s face Sometimes speech can even be felt by touching the face The best known multisensory illusion is the McGurk effect where incongruent visual articulation changes the auditory percept The interest in the McGurk effect arises from a major general question in multisensory research How is information from different senses combined Despite decades of research a conclusive explanation for the illusion remains elusive This is a good demonstration of the challenges in the study of multisensory integration Speech is special in many ways It is the main means of human communication and a manifestation of a unique language system It is a signal with which all humans have a lot of experience We are exposed to it from birth and learn it through development in face to face contact with others It is a signal that we can both perceive and produce The role of the motor system in speech perception has been debated for a long time Despite very active current research it is still unclear to which extent and in which role the motor system is involved in speech perception Recent evidence shows that brain areas involved in speech production are activated during listening to speech and watching a talker's articulatory gestures Speaking involves coordination of articulatory movements and monitoring their auditory and somatosensory consequences How do auditory visual somatosensory and motor brain areas interact during speech perception How do these sensorimotor interactions contribute to speech perception It is surprising that despite a vast amount of research the secrets of speech perception have not yet been solved The multisensory and sensorimotor approaches provide new opportunities in solving them Contributions to the research topic are encouraged for a wide spectrum of research on speech perception in multisensory and sensorimotor contexts including novel experimental findings ranging from psychophysics to brain imaging theories and models reviews and opinions

The effect of hearing loss on neural processing Jonathan E. Peelle, Arthur Wingfield, 2015-06-03 Efficient auditory processing requires the rapid integration of transient sensory inputs This is exemplified in human speech perception in which long stretches of a complex acoustic signal are typically processed accurately and essentially in real time Spoken language thus presents listeners auditory systems with a considerable challenge even when acoustic input is clear However auditory processing ability is frequently compromised due to congenital or acquired hearing loss or altered through background noise or assistive devices such as cochlear implants How does loss of sensory fidelity impact neural processing efficiency and health How does this ultimately influence behavior This Research Topic explores the neural consequences of hearing loss including basic processing carried out in the auditory periphery computations in subcortical nuclei and primary auditory cortex and higher level cognitive processes such as those involved in human speech perception By pulling together data from a variety of disciplines and perspectives we gain a more complete picture of the acute and chronic consequences of hearing loss for neural functioning
