

The GSX-R750 and GSX-R1100

The phrase race-replica was bandied about a lot when the first GSX-R was launched in 1985. This was a mistake, the smaller GSX-R was not a race-replica, it was a racer: period. It even looked like the factory endurance racer on which various components had been developed. The GSX-R didn't make any more power than its competitors, both the Suzuki and the FZ750 Yamaha claimed to make 100 bhp and the 900 cc GPZ Kawasaki made 115 bhp, it was the fact the thing only weighed 388 lb that made it so amazing.

The old saying goes that the most expensive thing to add to a bike is lightness, but Suzuki managed it with a combination of lightweight components, oil cooling, and a decided lack of creature comforts. The frame weighed only 18 lb without the swinging arm and wrapped around a motor that was pared down to the minimum possible weight thanks to oil cooling. Five-and-a-half litres of the stuff were pumped around the cylinder head and cooled in a big radiator thus enabling all the top-end components to be as light as possible.

On the road, the GSX-R felt like a racer. A third of the power arrived between 7000 and 9000 rpm, the flat-slide carbs didn't like being snapped open at low revs, and the chassis was very, very sensitive. If you twitched so did the bike, despite the unfashionably large 18-inch front wheel. I once took my left hand off the bars on one of the first GSX-Rs to look over my shoulder and was rewarded with a lock-to-lock tank-slapper. I was on one of London's major arterial roads at the time.

By contrast the first of the 1100 cc GSX-Rs had all of the technology, lack of weight and race-track cred of the 750, but it was astoundingly civilised. The twitchiness was gone, the fuely carburation banished, in its place was a massively powerful yet very usable if slightly plain sports tourer that could hustle when asked. After all, this is still a race-track bred machine we're talking about - it just didn't seem like it.

Acknowledgements

Our thanks are due to Joe Ortiz who suggested and arranged many of the photographs, in addition to performing mechanical work. MOX Spark Plugs (UK) Ltd supplied the color spars plug condition photographs and the Avon Rubber Company provided information on tire fitting.

Thanks are also due to Redcat Marketing and Kel Edge for supplying colour transparencies, to Fred Furlong of Yeovil for supplying the GSX-R1100 on the front cover, and to Phil Flowers who carried out the front cover photography. The introduction, "Suzuki - Every Which Way" was written by Julian Ryder.

About this Manual

The aim of this manual is to help you get the best value from your motorcycle. It can do so in several ways. It can help you decide what work must be done, even if you choose to have it done by a dealer; it provides information and procedures for routine maintenance and servicing; and it offers diagnostic and repair procedures to follow when trouble occurs.

We hope you use the manual to tackle the work yourself. For many simpler jobs, doing it yourself may be quicker than arranging an appointment to get the motorcycle into a dealer and making the trips to leave it and pick it up. More importantly, a lot of money can be saved by avoiding the expense the shop must pass on to you to cover its labour and overhead costs. An added benefit is the sense of satisfaction and accomplishment that you feel after doing the job yourself.

References to the left or right side of the motorcycle assume you are sitting on the seat, facing forward.

We take great pride in the accuracy of information given in this manual, but motorcycle manufacturers make alterations and design changes during the production run of a particular motorcycle of which they do not inform us. No liability can be accepted by the authors or publishers for loss, damage or injury caused by any errors in, or omissions from, the information given.

The GSX600F, 750F and 1100F (Katana)

Riders who didn't need a cutting-edge sportster also benefited from the GSX-R's development, because the engines were used in a new generation of GSX models (Katana in the UK). The 750 was steered down for the GSX600, a budget bike that was deliberately built to a price and not intended to compete with the Supersports 600s like the FZR or CBR. All-enveloping bodywork hid the steel chassis and produced an effect that one observer likened to a teapot when it appeared in 1987.

Aesthetics aside, the GSX was astounding value for money and the following year a better looking 750 cc version was launched. In late '87 the 1100 motor was used in a GSX aimed at the sports tourer segment occupied by FJ Yamahas and CBR Hondas. It was one of those bikes that wasn't well received on its launch but as time went on, like the GSXs, revealed itself as yet another very good motorcycle. And when you took the price into account they were seen as exceptional bikes.
