

Biology: Population Ecology

Population ecology

Interact with other species (density dependent factors) community level interactions
Community assemblage of populations of species living close enough for potential interaction.

Tree communities

- wood, trunk vs. shrubs, etc. interactions (54.1) Measures of diversity and trophic structure (54.2) Disturbances and succession (54.3) Biogeographic factors (54.4) A biological community is an assemblage of populations of various species living close enough for potential interactions.

The diversity of a community is the variety of organisms that make up a community.

How diversity changes over time.

- Two components of species diversity are species richness and relative abundance. Diversity is two things together.
- species richness and relative abundance. Relative abundance Both have 4 species but different abundance. Community 1 – 25% of community each species They have different levels of diversity Diversity can be compared using a diversity index Shannon diversity index Where A, B, and C are the species Shannon index/log of species richness Give us a measure

Community diversity is reduced as a result of invasive species. Two communities can have the same number of species but different measures of diversity—a community that is more diverse has more species that are evenly distributed in terms of relative abundance.

Why is diversity important?

Community composition can be used as a measure of environmental quality Community health.
