The stability of the collagen triple helix depends partly on the repetitive sequence of amino acids which comprise the individual alpha helices. Which of the following amino acids most likely faces the center of the collagen triple helix? - -Glycine

The most stable structure for the collagen triple helix will likely feature the amino acid with the least sterically-hindered functional group facing the center of the helix; as such, glycine, whose functional group is a mere hydrogen atom, will be most likely to face the center of a stable triple helix

It has been shown that hydroxylation of proline in the presence of ascorbic acid dramatically increases the stability of the procollagen superstructure that comprises collagen. Which of the following likely contributes most to the added stability that results from hydroxylation? - -Stereo-electronic effects

Based on information in the passage and data presented in Figures 2 and 3, the absence of ascorbic acid causes which of the following outcomes? - -Decrease in the rate of pro-collagen secretion.

Once radiolabeled for detection, which of the following amino acids would be LEAST likely to accurately measure the amount of non-procollagen secreted? - -Hydroxyproline Hydroxyproline is considered a non-proteinogenic - or, "unnatural" - amino acid in the sense that it is not typically found in the proteins that comprise the body. In addition to its absence in the list of twenty-one proteinogenic amino acids (the usual 20 plus selenocysteine), it may be inferred from the passage that hydroxyproline is created specifically for the increased stability of collagen.

Which of the following is an example of horizontal gene transfer? - -Conjugation between an Hfr and an F- bacterium.

According to the passage, horizontal gene transfer is a process in which an organism incorporates genetic material from another organism without being the offspring of that organism. Conjugation, the passing of genetic material from bacteria to bacteria via a conjugation bridge, is an example of this.

The fact that the Sputnik genome contains both mimivirus and mamavirus genes supports the conclusion that it participates in a process similar to: - -Transduction

The Sputnik genome containing genes from its mamavirus host is similar to a bacteriophage viral genome that contains bacterial host genes, as happens in transduction enticing medical possibilities offered by the therapeutic use of stem cells the complexities surrounding the cloning of animals and possibly humans and the development of transgenic agricultural crops have given new impetus to the expansion of traditional bioethical horizons Bioethics must now adjust to these new realities for it is clear that public interest in the field is growing as these new challenges appear
