WEEK 2 CASE STUDY| CHEMISTRY

1. How are carbohydrates and fats related to each other chemically?

Carbohydrates and Fats are both organic molecules. They are both types of macromolecules. Both contain the same 3 elements of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen.

2. Mitch was told to watch his saturated fats. What is the difference between saturated and unsaturated fat?

In our textbook saturated fats such as palmitic acid has as much hydrogen as it can carry. No more could be added without exceeding four covalent bonds per carbon, thus being saturated with hydrogen (Saladin 2020 pg. 59). So, it has the greatest number of hydrogen atoms possible. Unsaturated fats such as linoleic acid, are with one or more carbon-to-carbon double bonds (Saladin 2020 pg.59). Saturated fats are solid at room temperature versus unsaturated fats are liquid at room temperature. (Chamberlain University 2023).

3. Why is it better to consume unsaturated fats over saturated fats?

It is better to consume unsaturated fats than saturated fats because, lowers levels of bad cholesterol and triglycerides and raises good cholesterol and improves the control of blood sugar levels. Saturated fats raise levels of cholesterol raising your LDL. (Low-density lipoprotein). Because of this it can increase the risk of heart and blood vessel disease (Staff, M.C. 2023)

4. If you look at food packaging, you may see the word trans-fat. What is a trans-fat, how is it made, and why would companies want to add trans fats to their foods.

A trans-fat is a triglyceride containing one or more trans-fatty acids (Saladin 2020 pg. 60). It is a synthetic fat that is created by adding hydrogen atoms into vegetable oil and causes the liquid to become a solid at room temperature. Since the oil is hydrogenated, it will have a longer shelf life. This is one of the many reasons companies add trans fats to their food to improve its texture, flavor, and its shelf-life (Foundation, M 2022)
