

Chewing is the first stage of the digestive system. The food goes into your mouth. When you chew your food, the food particles break down into small pieces that are easier to swallow. The saliva has a lot of enzymes that mix with food particles and break down the food particles more. This is called oral enzyme digestion.

After you are done chewing, the swallow reflex goes to work and food starts to go down. The food that leaves through a hole just called esophagus, which the food particles are pushed down with swallowing through the esophagus. They come to the stomach. It is called peristalsis in a part called peristalsis and it helps make sure the muscle contracts to push bits of food into the stomach. There is also water and acid that help for health. Stay in the esophagus and eat to keep out the acid.

The stomach releases lots of acids and enzymes to break down the food particles even more so our body can absorb it. An enzyme called pepsin present in the stomach helps break down the protein.

I am being dissolved by enzymes that break down food into small pieces. It comes from saliva. This is also where the esophagus is located and helps to keep food from going into the windpipe.

I am going to the stomach where I will stay for 4 hours.

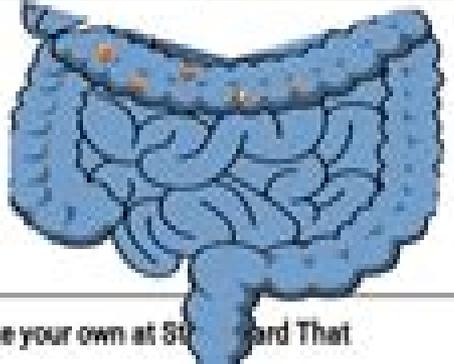

There are lots of enzymes that break down the food.

When the food reaches the small intestine, lots of acids are produced from the pancreas and liver and peristalsis to mix acids and the particles. The pancreas also secretes enzymes to help break down the food particles. After that, the particles are absorbed through blood. This is called enzyme digestion.

The food that is not absorbed by the small intestine will arrive at the large intestine and when the food leaves through it the large intestine will absorb the water and other remaining particles and send it out of your body known as excretion. The intestine is also where microbes are located and help increase the surface area of intestine so that the nutrients can pass through.

Now I am at the final stage of the digestion, the large intestine.
