

Abiotic Factors Affect Biome Distribution

Key Idea: Temperature and rainfall play an important role in determining the geographical location of terrestrial biomes. Temperature and precipitation are excellent predictors of biome distribution. Temperature decreases from the equator to the poles. Temperature and precipitation act together as limiting factors to determine the type of desert, grassland, or forest biome in a region. Latitude directly affects solar input and temperature.

Within a single latitudinal region, the level of precipitation (rainfall) governs the type of plant community found. Note that the effect of altitude is similar to that of latitude: ice will occur at high altitudes even at low-latitudes.

As the Earth curves towards the poles, solar energy is spread out over an ever increasing area. This energy must also travel through a greater amount of the atmosphere, expending more energy than at low latitudes.

1. Explain how temperature and rainfall affect the distribution of biomes: _____

2. Explain why biomes are not evenly distributed about the globe: _____

3. Explain how the landscape can modify climate: _____

4. Explain why higher latitudes receive less solar energy than lower latitudes: _____
