

CHC2D – Canadian History Since World War I
Unit 1 – Lesson 17
1916 – The Battle of the Somme & Letters from the Trenches

Background

- 1915 saw both sides in the war attempt to break the stalemate which developed in the fall of 1914.
- They used new weapons like chlorine gas.
- They tried to bring new allies into the war as Italy joined the Entente and the Ottoman Empire joined the Central Powers.
- None of these changes were able to break the stalemate of trench warfare.

A New Strategy

- Unable to break through the heavily defended trenches, generals began to consider new strategies in an attempt to win the war.
- The Germans, who had a larger population than France, decided that the only way to win the war was to kill more French soldiers than they lost in battles.
- Gaining territory was no longer the goal of a battle, killing more of the enemy was.

War of Attrition

- The new goal of war was known as attrition, kill more of the enemy than you lose.
- The idea was for Germany to take advantage of its larger population by turning the war into a marathon rather than a sprint.
- This way, heavier French losses would not be able to be replaced by its smaller population and Germany would force France to surrender.

Battles of 1916

- The Germans planned to use the idea of attrition at the battle of Verdun where they attacked the French forces.
- The French, who were losing so many men that their soldiers started to disobey their orders, this is called mutiny.
- With their army in chaos, the French government pleaded with its British ally to attack the German lines in the North.

The Somme

- The British agreed to assist their French allies by attacking the Germans near the Somme river.
- The Somme became part of a year long series of battles including Verdun and others including Russia vs Austria & Germany and Italy vs Austria.
- 1916 would become the most tragic year for the average soldier of World War I.

The Plan

- The Somme was a massive battle fought along nearly 30 kilometers of trenches.
- The British planned to attack the German trenches on July 1.
- For eight days before July 1, the British were constantly bombarding the German trenches hoping to destroy the barbed wire and concrete bunkers defending them.

The Maritime Archaeology of a Modern Conflict Innes McCartney, 2014-10-24 Over the last 30 years hydrographical marine surveys in the English Channel helped uncover the potential wreck sites of German submarines or U boats sunk during the conflicts of World War I and World War II Through a series of systemic dives nautical archaeologist and historian Innes McCartney surveyed and recorded these wrecks discovering that the distribution and number of wrecks conflicted with the published histories of U boat losses Of all the U boat war losses in the Channel McCartney found that some 41% were heretofore unaccounted for in the historical literature of World War I and World War II This book reconciles these inaccuracies with the archaeological record by presenting case studies of a number of dives conducted in the English Channel Using empirical evidence this book investigates possible reasons historical inconsistencies persist and what Allied operational and intelligence based processes caused them to occur in the first place This book will be of interest to scholars and researchers in the fields of nautical archaeology and naval history as well as wreck explorers
