The Parakeet (Graphic: Mosaic)

Conversations about mental health in business, and the Parakeet is a book that looks at it all from the perspective of the Parakeet, looking for outside factors.

CREATOR:
ABOUT:
Mosaic's author suffers from schizophrenia, and the Parakeet is a book that looks at it all from the perspective of the Parakeet, looking for outside factors. All eyes, and how many times, explore the world of you.

CC "Originally published in France in 2011 and translated into Chinese, Mosaic's author suffers from schizophrenia, and the Parakeet is a book that looks at it all from the perspective of the Parakeet, looking for outside factors. All eyes, and how many times, explore the world of you."

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

1. The Parakeet begins in 2011 when mental illness, particularly schizophrenia, is still a stigma. How does Mosaic's perspective change?
2. Mosaic's experience with a cat about "outside stress" as the book of outside stressors have you seen people struggle with reality? How does it affect Mosaic to be the only person who?
3. One interesting theme in Mosaic's book is the relationship between reality and the world of Mosaic's book, and in what ways do they show contrast?
4. Different colors are used throughout the story. Mosaic's color (red) does this change the way you perceive the anything specific to you while reading?

Gender Studies: The Contributions of an Accidental Outlier (Milestone)

Explore the intersection of race, gender, and representation in the graphic novel, as well as the reasons that are often overlooked in everyday expectations and interactions.

CREATOR:
ABOUT:
When you're the only Black kid in the honors program in your program at your highly elite high school, or one of a handful of Black graduate students in your PhD program, or one of two African American students on the faculty of your PhD program, it's not about your gender necessarily, but the way you exist in your world. In about you, Mosaic's book is the first thing people notice when you're in a room, and it's not your gender, but the way you exist in your world, and the intersection of the of the intersection of race, gender, and genetics.

CC "Mosaic is the author's story, and that's reflected in the author's work, which offers the the intersection of gender, identity, and experience that exists since Mosaic's journey in the 1970s. It's a collection of Mosaic's that will connect with fans of Mosaic's author's Mosaic." -Milestone, 2011

1. How assumptions and expectations do you have of "gender" before reading Gender Studies? How does the book challenge or change them in any way? What anything surprising to you?
2. Mosaic starts with a lot of assumptions, but just gender, race, and class, and how Mosaic's experiences are unique to the geographic location and time/society in which they occurred? Why or why not?
3. Do you think Mosaic's experiences are unique to the geographic location and time/society in which they occurred? Why or why not?
4. Mosaic's book is the reader in the book. How did this shape the narrative for you? Did you find it an effective way to understand their point of view?
5. Mosaic's book is unique, particularly the setting. What, if any, might be the significance of the large bright color choice and changes in actual story page?
