How to do double spacing in Word: Step by step

Double spacing in Word is quick and easy to do once you know how.

If your document is locked, start by unlocking Word. This will ensure you can make edits as needed.

Next, pick the section of your document you want to double-space. You can do this by highlighting the relevant text with your cursor. If you'd like to double-space the whole document, there's no need to highlight specific sections—Word will automatically double-space the entire text.

Next, go to the "Design" tab at the top of Word. In Design, click "Paragraph spacing". You'll be given a menu with various spacing options. Scroll down to "Double" and click it. You should find your text is now double-spaced.

If you don't want to format your document after it's written, you can set your document to automatically double-space right from the start. Simply select "Double" in the "Design" "Paragraph spacing" menu before you begin typing.

If you dip back and forth between different line spacing formats, it can be useful to learn the keyboard shortcuts for each (a
