High School Dropout, Graduation, and Completion Rates National Academy of Education, National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Center for Education, Committee for Improved Measurement of High School Dropout and Completion Rates: Expert Guidance on Next Steps for Research and Policy Workshop, 2011-04-17 High school graduation and dropout rates have long been used as indicators of educational system productivity and effectiveness and of social and economic well being While determining these rates may seem like a straightforward task their calculation is in fact quite complicated How does one count a student who leaves a regular high school but later completes a GED How does one count a student who spends most of his her high school years at one school and then transfers to another If the student graduates which school should receive credit If the student drops out which school should take responsibility High School Dropout Graduation and Completion Rates addresses these issues and to examine 1 the strengths limitations accuracy and utility of the available dropout and completion measures 2 the state of the art with respect to longitudinal data systems and 3 ways that dropout and completion rates can be used to improve policy and practice

Did Social Safety Net Scholarships Reduce Drop-Out Rates During the Indonesian Economic Crisis? Lisa A. Cameron, 2002 This paper uses regression and matching techniques to evaluate Indonesia's Social Safety Net Scholarships Program The program aimed to prevent large numbers of children from dropping out of school as a result of the Asian economic crisis of 1998 It was expected that families would find it difficult to keep their children in school and that dropout rates would be high as they were during the recession of the 1980s However dropout rates did not increase markedly and enrollment rates have remained relatively steady This paper examines the role played by the scholarship program in producing this result Data were drawn from a national household survey of 100 rural villages across Indonesia conducted in 1994 and 5 times in 1997-99 The scholarships were found to have been effective in reducing dropouts at the lower secondary school level by about three percentage points but had no discernable impact at the primary and upper secondary school levels Analyses also examined how well the program adhered to its documented targeting design and how effective this design was in reaching the poor The targeting criteria appear to have been followed quite closely but this did not prevent some households with higher reported per capita expenditures from receiving the scholarship Contains 23 references and data tables and figures Author SV
